

MCKINLEY FAMILY IN IRELAND

Rev. Van Schaick Tells Interesting History.

MET ONE ON COUNTRY DRIVE

Saw the Cottage With "Francis McKinley" Carved on One of the Beams.

In the course of his lecture on "The Highways and Byways of Ireland," delivered at the Church of Our Father last night, the Rev. John Van Schaick gave a most interesting history of the famous McKinley family of Ireland, with which, he said, the ancestors of President McKinley were connected.

Traveling last summer from Belfast gentleman, said Dr. Van Schaick, "and with an Irish Presbyterian clergyman, who told him of the number of Americans who were visiting Ballymoney, where the McKinley family originated. Upon inquiry, Dr. Van Schaick learned that his companion was a McKinley and nearly related to the American family.

"He was a very modest, intelligent gentleman," said Dr. Van Schaick, "and he said he had spent many months studying the genealogies of the Irish and American families, and was absolutely sure of the connection. The facts of the story that he relates are these:

Driven to America. "Francis McKinley, one of the ancestors of the President, a man of Scotch-Irish blood, lived in Northern Ireland, in which is now County Antrim. He was a respectable, honest man, and was generally liked. In a rebellion, however, of the seventeenth century, some of his enemies circulated stories that he was disloyal to the King. He voluntarily went down to Coleraine, a large market town eight and a half miles to the north, to clear himself. There he was seized by the English authorities and hanged in the main street of the town. The shocking news came back to his home. It drove his young wife mad. The horror of it all drove the family to America.

As in thousands of other cases, Ireland's loss was America's gain. Francis McKinley never been hanged in Ireland. William McKinley would probably never have been President of the United States.

Sought the Place.

"In hearing this story, I became so much interested in the McKinleys that I determined to see the place where they lived. I arranged a stop-over on my ticket, and alighted at supper time in Ballymoney, a typical Irish village. One met pigs and cows in the street, and smelt the peat smoke from the cottages, where the people were preparing their evening meal, and soon reached a dilapidated little place, which was pointed out as the ancestral home of the McKinleys. Surely one might well have said here in tones of doubt and scorn, 'Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?'

Home of the McKinleys.

"The old home was a small one-story cottage, the shape of the cottage of Robert Burns. The roof was of thatch, but it was leaking badly. One of the beams had been taken out by an enterprising American speculator because it had the initials of Francis McKinley carved upon it. The doors had fallen off, the windows were out, and the place was used only as a storehouse for coal and barn. The owner had built himself a more comfortable cottage near by. He was a son of the original family, I am glad to say, for he was the wisest example of cupidity and greed I saw in the entire country.

"He rallied at Americans because they did not rock there in large numbers. He threatened to pull the old house down to get it out of the way. The Irish landlord with me was named John, and said the man would not pull it down if he earned 2 shillings a year out of it, and that he was the wisest all around as a narrow-minded hog. I had no data that would enable me to dispute the statement.

"I advise nobody to go to the Garry Bog. I advise everybody traveling, as Longfellow says, 'to go by the way,' to reflect upon how God overrules the calamities of nations and individuals to the good of society and out of apparent evil still educates good. We cannot but evilly intend that her children be driven away, leaving her desolate. We can only rejoice that if they had to go, so many came to us.

For Equal Rights. "We must regret harsh treatment of any people by any government. We must resolve, however, to make our country so great and so good that no government can ever stand among us that does not give equal justice to all."

Funeral services for the late George Ernest Mason were held at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the family residence, 218 O Street northwest. The services were conducted by the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor of All Souls Unitarian Church. The pallbearers were furnished by the Masonic order and were as follows: W. S. Quinter, J. W. Quinter, Howard Wilson, Charles F. Benjamin, H. M. Haddock, and G. Y. Allen. The burial services and rites at the grave were conducted by the Federal Lodge of Masons, of which the deceased was a prominent member. The deceased, born on April 28, 1872, is survived by his mother, Mrs. Josephine A. Mason, and one brother, Harry E. Mason. Interment was in Rock Creek Cemetery.

SAID FIGHTING COCK WAS NOT AN ANIMAL

DUBLIN, Nov. 14.—Some cockfighters in Fermanagh, when charged under the cruelty to animals act with setting two gamecocks at each other, raised the novel point that a cock is not an "animal" within the meaning of the act. The magistrate dismissed the prosecution, but stated a case for the King's bench.

Fitted in Her Prison For Stunning Dresses

Nan Patterson Prepares for Trial on the Charge of Murdering Bookmaker Caesar Young—Sister of Actress in New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Nan Patterson spent the last Sunday in the Tombs before the beginning of her trial in a rather happy frame of mind. She not only appeared very cheerful, but took an interest in the afternoon religious service.

A Mrs. Green, of Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, conducted the service at the end of the women's corridor.

On previous Sundays Miss Patterson has kept away as far as possible from the table where she sits with the lead services. Yesterday she took a seat well down near the front and assisted in the singing.

It came out that Miss Patterson's sister, Mrs. Smith, for whom, it is said, the district attorney is looking, is in this city, and that she has made two calls upon her sister in the Tombs.

A woman veiled and wearing black called at the Tombs yesterday afternoon and asked to see the prisoner. She said she was Mrs. Smith and on being told that no visitors were allowed to see prisoners on Sunday she was much surprised. "Why, I have been to see her twice before," she said.

The prisoner's father called, as he has done every day since his daughter was arrested. He left the Sunday papers and a note more buoyant than some he had sent on other Sundays.

It was learned that Nan Patterson had been attended by a fashionable dressmaker for two weeks, and it is expected that her costumes will cause something of a sensation when she appears in court.

The visits of the dressmaker have been kept very quiet. The prisoner obtained permission to have the dressmaker go to her cell and asked that her visits be kept secret. This wish has been regarded, and no one will say very much concerning the new dresses, except an attendant, who admitted they were "stunning." She has also purchased a collection of hats.

The prisoner ate a hearty dinner, remarking, it is said, that she wanted to be strong for the coming ordeal.

NEW CHURCH DEDICATED IN EAST WASHINGTON

Building of Parish of Holy Redeemer Formally Dedicated to Service of God.

The Church of the Holy Redeemer, in the Roman Catholic parish in East Washington, was formally dedicated yesterday. The ceremony which was simple but impressive was witnessed by a congregation which filled the new edifice to its utmost capacity. The dedicatory services which were begun with low mass at 7 o'clock in the morning, were concluded at 7:30 p. m., when the sermon was preached by the rector, the Rev. Joseph J. Maguire.

The opening of the new church was also signified by the commencement of a mission for men and women which will continue for a week. The mission was inaugurated by the Rev. Father Maguire, who will be assisted by the Rev. W. G. Kerby and C. E. Boone, of the Catholic University of America. The altar in the Church of Holy Redeemer was originally made for historic Holy Trinity in Georgetown, and was presented to the congregation of the new church by the Rev. Father Maguire, S. J., rector of Holy Trinity.

At the dedicatory exercises the Rev. Father Maguire acted as the celebrant. Besides those already mentioned, he was assisted by the Rev. Charles W. Currier, rector of St. Joseph's, and the Rev. Father Sullivan, of the Catholic University.

BETHANY BAPTIST CHURCH HOLDS FIRST MEETING

Members of the Bethany Baptist Church held their first services as a duly organized church yesterday, in the temporary quarters at 1801 Third Street northwest, the old Gilmore Mansion, and at present the residence of Mrs. E. Pullman. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Long, of Boston.

Bethany Baptist Church was organized November 4, 1904, by members of the First Metropolitan, Calvary, and other Baptist churches, who reside in Bloomingdale, Eckington, and Le Droit Park.

The new organization was not the result of any dissatisfaction, but because it was thought that there were a sufficient number of members of this denomination residing in that vicinity to support a church of their own. The new church has already enrolled over fifty members.

At a meeting held in the temporary quarters of the church on Wednesday last, the pastors and other representatives of the different Baptist churches in this district formally recognized the Bethany Baptist Church as an authorized member of their body.

RAILROAD MAN KILLED IN CUMBERLAND YARDS

CUMBERLAND, Md., Nov. 14.—Daniel S. Betz, aged thirty, an employee of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, was almost instantly killed in the railroad yards here Saturday.

Betz slipped on the ice and fell under a moving train. The body was dragged a considerable distance over the ties before the car under which he fell finally left the track, causing a wreck. Betz's home was in Brandon.

HORSE SHOW NOW AMUSES NEW YORK

Society for Weeks Has Been Preparing for It.

BIG ENTRIES THIS YEAR

Prices Paid for Boxes a Shade Higher Than Ever Before—Outsiders Well Represented.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—With a blare of trumpets and a flutter of finery the twentieth annual exhibition of the National Horse Show Association opened this morning in Madison Square Garden.

In the words of the professional showman, it is "bigger, grander, and more magnificent than ever before."

One hundred more entries have been made to the various classes than last year, but that is of secondary importance to the average horse show patron. The clatter of hoofs of high-bred equines comes after pretty face, silks, and feathers.

Taxed the Tailors.

For weeks past society has been preparing for the six days' display that begins today. The capacities of the most exclusive tailoring and dressmaking establishments have been taxed, and many thousands of dollars have been expended on gorgeous creations. Mr. Four Hundred and Miss Knickerbocker are now ready for the competition.

Prices paid for boxes this year are a shade higher than ever before. The Morgans, Sturges, Joneses, and other equally well-known New Yorkers were purchasers, while the out-of-town buyers are more numerous than usual. Philadelphia and Boston are particularly well represented.

Two Absentees.

Two notable absentees from the list of exhibitors are Reginald Vanderbilt and Dr. W. E. Woodend. The former has not yet told Mr. Jerome what he knows about Richard Canfield's Forty-fourth Street house, so it would be impossible for him to speed his high steppers in Madison Square Garden with any degree of comfort.

Dr. Woodend has not recovered from the financial shock received shortly after last year's show.

COMING ANNIVERSARY OF ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH

Dr. Stafford Explains the Week's Festivities to His Congregation. President and Cardinal.

The Rev. Dr. Stafford, at the services at St. Patrick's Church yesterday, devoted the time usually assigned for the instructions at the low masses and the sermon at the high mass to an explanation of the week of festivities which will begin next Sunday, marking the dedication of the new academy, the new Carroll Hall, and the new rectory in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of St. Patrick's parish.

The event, said Dr. Stafford, will be made notable by the presence of Cardinal Gibbons and President Roosevelt.

The Knights of Columbus, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the members of Carroll Institute, and the men of the congregation will meet at Carroll Institute next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock and march in a body to the rectory.

In case the weather is fine, the exercises will take place outside, and the addresses of the President, the cardinal, Commissioner Macfarland, and Dr. Stafford will be made from the portico over the main entrance to the rectory.

Conclude, which was purchased during the Spanish war, has also been withdrawn from the service, and will eventually be destroyed, as soon as the guns adapted to its use are replaced by guns of a more modern type. It has not met with satisfaction.

After declaring the superiority of the smokeless powder, in his annual report, Rear Admiral N. E. Mason, chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, reviews the difficulty the department has had in obtaining smokeless powder.

Lack of officers for cadet duty, and the overtaxing of the navy gun factory at the Washington navy yard, are discussed at length by Rear Admiral Mason, who says of the local gun factories:

"The naval gun factory has been running nine and ten days at full capacity, and although good progress has been made, the congested condition of all work gives assurance that in capacity is being overtaxed, and must, unless this capacity is materially increased, eventually result in failure to meet the ordinary demands of the contractors."

EIGHT PRISONERS ESCAPE FROM BURNING JAIL

TIPTONVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 14.—The jail here was burned Saturday night, and eight prisoners, one of whom is a negro charged with murder, escaped. The fire was started, it is alleged, by confederates on the outside for the purpose of delivering the prisoners.

MORGAN IS AGAIN ELECTED CAPTAIN

Georgetown Ball Team Chooses Its Leader.

PLAYED AT NOTRE DAME

Was Only a Prep, So He Has One More Year in Intercollegiate Athletics.

At a meeting held last night of the members of last spring's team that won their G's, James E. Morgan, 1904, of Iowa, was elected captain of the Georgetown baseball team for 1905.

The new captain has already represented the Blue and Gray on the diamond for three years, playing third base ever since he entered the university. A year ago he was chosen leader as the successor of Sam Apperious, and led the nine through the last season.

It has always been the custom at Georgetown, as at all other colleges, to elect a captain after the last game on the schedule, but last June, for some unknown cause, this was not done, and up to date the team has been without a captain.

Prep at Notre Dame.

Morgan prepared for college at the Notre Dame Prep School, which is affiliated with Notre Dame University, and during his last prep school year he played on the varsity team. Had this been taken as a year in intercollegiate athletics Morgan would be ineligible under the four-year rule, but the Georgetown executive committee decided that in view of the fact that he was really ineligible under the strict rules when he played at Notre Dame, the year could not be considered "intercollegiate," and that he has one year more to represent Blue and Gray.

Graduate coaching, which was inaugurated last year with Charley Moran, coach of the 1903 team, will be continued next spring with Sam Apperious, captain in 1903, as head coach. Apperious is still in the university, but has played his allotted four years.

Veterans Lost.

Of the 1904 team, Apperious, left field; Dowling, first base; Dorman, shortstop; Seitz, pitcher; Drill, pitcher, and Connor, outfielder, will be missing when the candidates are called out for the first practice in March.

AN OBJECT LESSON

In a Restaurant.

A physician puts the query: Have you ever noticed in any large restaurant at lunch or dinner time the large number of hearty, vigorous old men at the tables; men whose ages run from sixty to eighty years; many of them bald, and all, perhaps, gray, but none of them feeble or senile?

Perhaps the spectacle is so common as to have escaped your observation or comment, but nevertheless it is an object lesson which means something. If you will notice what these hearty old fellows are eating, you will observe that they are not munching away at crackers nor gingerly picking their way through a menu card of new fangled health food. On the contrary, they seem to prefer a juicy roast of beef, a properly turned loin of mutton, and even the deadly broiled lobster is not altogether ignored.

The point of all this is that a vigorous old age depends upon good digestion and plenty of wholesome food, and not upon dieting and an endeavor to live upon bran crackers.

There is a certain class of food cranks who seem to believe that meat, coffee, and many other good things are rank poisons, and these cadaverous, sickly-looking individuals are a walking condemnation of their own theories.

The matter in a nutshell is that if the stomach secretes the natural digestive juices in sufficient quantity, any wholesome food will be promptly digested; if the stomach does not do so, and certain foods cause distress, one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal will remove all difficulty, because they supply just what every weak stomach lacks: pepsin, hydro-chloric acid, diastase, and aux.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do not act upon the bowels, and, in fact, are not strictly a medicine as they act almost entirely upon the food eaten, digesting it thoroughly and thus giving the stomach a much needed rest and an appetite for the next meal.

Of people who travel, nine out of ten use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, knowing them to be perfectly safe to use at any time and also having found out by experience that they are a safeguard against indigestion in any form, and eating as they have to, at all hours and all kinds of food, the traveling public for years have pinned their faith to Stuart's Tablets.

All druggists sell them at 50 cents for full-sized packages, and any druggist from Maine to California, if his opinion were asked, will say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the most popular and successful remedy for any stomach trouble.
